

COVID-19: Growing Trees Network with a new inspiring afforestation initiative

On Friday the 22nd of May the worlds famous Danish DJ Martin Jensen will be streaming his ME MYSELF ONLINE concert directly from the unique Forest Tower at Camp Adventure in Denmark. The concert will be streamed all over the world free of charge. The audience is encouraged to donate funds to support Growing Trees Network Foundations effort to establishing Community Forests in Denmark. Martin Jensen has during the COVID-19 streamed his concerts from an empty stadium, a frigate and on Friday from the Forest Tower at Camp Adventure supporting different charitable initiatives.

The music activities of Martin Jensen during the COVID-19 and his focus on planting trees for the climate will also be the launch of the latest initiative by Growing Trees – establishing minimum 2 Community Forests in Denmark dedicated to honor and appreciate all those who have made an extraordinary effort or sacrifice to combat the COVID-19 virus. From closed businesses, deepfelt deprivation, the distance to other people, parents teaching at home to everything we can thank each other for is what these new Community Forests are all about.

To honor and acknowledge the global effort we hereby invite citizens, foundations and companies to donate trees for these new 2-4 Community Forests. Besides inviting the Danes to donate Growing Trees is sending out an invitation internationally to other organizations to initiate something similar.

Lars Heiselberg Vang Jensen, Chairman of Growing Trees Network Foundation, says:

”It is the intention that these new Community Forests shall be living monuments acknowledging the united effort in Denmark and worldwide to cope with the COVID-19 virus. From our daily work we also know that it means a lot to many people that they can plant a tree in the loving memory of a dear one passed away. Through the Community Forests it is possible for everyone to honor the huge societal effort by planting trees.

In many developing countries access to food sources is becoming an even bigger problem. We hope that when other treeplanting organizations adopt the idea they will have focus on planting fruit and nut trees to help the locals become self-sufficient and better equipped to cope on a daily basis with similar crisis in the future.”

The new Community Forests are expected to be established in a municipality in Jutland and Zealand and hopefully a couple of places more in the autumn of this year or the spring of 2021. Dates will be announced on www.growingtrees.dk.

The coffin manufacturer Tommerup Heilskov and the Real Estate Chain RealMæglerne has already decided to donate the first trees for the new Community Forests.
